Open Letter

To High Priest Osler, of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints.

Dear Sir:

In your ministrations to the people will you kindly explain to them the recent revelation which you claim to have been received from the Almighty, giving to prophet Fred Smith the Seer and Revelator of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, "Supreme Directional Control" over all the affairs of the Church. Also explain how you harmonize the doctrine of hereditary rule for the line of the Smiths over the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, said rule being reserved for that family and for no other. Also tell us how you reconcile the teaching of baptism for the dead as taught in your Doctrine and Covenants with the teaching of the Holy Scriptures. We should also like for you to inform us how a First Presidency was set up in the Church over all other officers when the Bible tells us that God hath set some in the Church, First Apostles. See 1 Cor. 12:28.

Also please say if you would be willing to defend the above issues in a public discussion before the citizens of Oyen. We are interested only in the presentation of the Truth and from the record of the unfortunate results which have followed the introduction of a First Presidency and its claim to

WORLD HAPPENINGS
BRIEFLY TOLD

For the first time seven judges took their seats on the bench of the Supreme Court of Canada. The Supreme Court was enlarged last session to its present complement.

Conspicuous upon the recent opening of the Commonwealth parliament at Canberra have been transmitted by President Coolidge in a message to the governor-general of Australia.

Liquor seized by the coastguard from rum runners outside the 12-mile limit can be introduced as evidence in the trials of the rum runners, the U.S. Supreme Court decided.

Motorists and conductors of the Winnipeg Electric Railway have settled the question of wages by accepting the company's offer of one cent an hour increase each year with a three-year contract.

By the present tentative plan, the Prince of Wales and Princess Alexandra will sail from England July 23, arriving in Quebec July 29. The Prince and the Princess will visit the cities of 2 and 4 in Ottawa as guests of Their Excellencies, the Governor-General and Lady Willington and of the Government of Canada.

One of the first collections of Indian material in Canada consisting of bone, horn, stone and shell objects which was recently purchased by McGill University has just arrived at the David Ross McCord National Museum. This collection was made in the ground many years ago in the district surrounding Brantford, Ont.

"First class" is the word that Hon. George Howland, minister of agriculture, applies to Alberta crop prospects. He says that in 26 years' experience in the province he has never known the land in general to be in such good condition, and the reports that are coming in give every reason to expect a big season. Sir Frederick Statour, director of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau in commenting on the predictions of Herbert Brown, of the Dominion D.C., for the effect that 1927 will be a summer year, said he does not regard such a prospect as probable, and that even if the year should prove to be summerish it would be impossible to foretell the fact this far in advance.

Observing Diamond Jubilee

Large Attendance Expected at Service in Westminster Abbey

Preparations are now well advanced for the great service in Westminster Abbey, July 1, which will form the chief commemoration in London of Canada's Diamond Jubilee. The Dean of Westminster, Very Rev. Dr. Pasley Norrie, has drawn up an order of service which follows as nearly as possible that which was used when the jubilee of Confederation was commemorated in the Abbey in 1917.

Owing to the King and Queen having a number of engagements in Scotland so close to the date, it is feared it will be impossible for Their Majesties to be present in person. The Duke of Connaught already has indicated his intention to be present. Practically the whole of the British cabinet and a large number of representatives of embassies and legations have asked that seats be reserved for them.

Not to Be Trusted

Breat Britain is full in many ways to honor the celebration of Queen's day. Her Majesty's intentions are honest and that it will be on depend upon her. She has always found to her credit that confidence of this overgrown nation was easily misplaced. The Soviets are incurable. They do not let the right hand know what the left hand is doing. They make promises to one's face and break them behind his back.

Molding the Child's Life

A Warning to Mothers to Watch Childhood Dreams

An exhortation to mothers to study the child, the all important molding of his life, their children, which when uncontrolled may lead to disaster, is contained in an article by Florence Hull Whitehead in the June issue of "Psychology Magazine."

Mrs. Whitehead in emphasizing the importance of childhood dreams writes: "It is from childhood dreams that the stuff of good or evil lives is obtained. The little child knows so much less than he believes; he believes so much more than he imagines. Imagination is the line of life, the pivot of his faith. What he wants this he dreams about. What he has in dreams, this he achieves later in his daily life. Dreams influence reality and reality gives out the material from which dreams are built."

"If it is hard," points out Mrs. Whitehead, "the events most logical and truthful person to accurately distinguish between the ideas obtained out of practice living and those intangible fancies coming in dreams, how much more impossible is it for a child who is so much less than he believes; he believes so much more than he imagines. Imagination is the line of life, the pivot of his faith. What he wants this he dreams about. What he has in dreams, this he achieves later in his daily life. Dreams influence reality and reality gives out the material from which dreams are built."

Mrs. Whitehead stresses the fact that among children dreams are often creative. "The activities of a child who is forced to repress in dreams," she writes, "in an exaggerated shape, the disintegrable elements of his life. In a way, are things seldom taken account of by the grown people who have almost forgotten their childhood. The old-time practices of a child who is forced to repress in dreams, she writes, "in an exaggerated shape, the disintegrable elements of his life. The old-time practices of a child who is forced to repress in dreams, she writes, "in an exaggerated shape, the disintegrable elements of his life. In a way, are things seldom taken account of by the grown people who have almost forgotten their childhood."

"In almost every body there is a tendency toward some special type of dream," observes the article in "Psychology." "Originality is a preferred desire of some sort. It is not only our privilege but our duty to study our child and find out precisely the type of dream in his dream life. Dream life is more than half the existence of children, and the wise parent may exercise deep and permanent influence over their brains by suggestions toward right."

Success Assured If Anything Worth While is Advertised

Some time ago the people of Colorado Springs got the idea that there were business attractions in that place for tourists. Following up this bright idea they made spasmodic efforts for several seasons to attract visitors, but without much success. So they decided to appropriate $11,000 for advertising. This helped, and the next year they increased their advertising to $60,000. They advertised chiefly in newspapers, all over the country. Over $8,000,000 visited Colorado Springs last year, carrying with them $1,000,000. They advertised chiefly in newspapers, all over the country. Supporting Mother Country

Says Canada's Attitude is Most Satisfactory Aspect of Imbroglio

Dismissing Britain's break with the Soviet in his paper, the Observer, J. E. Cairns says: "Canada has set a magnificent example in supporting immediately the action taken by the Mother Country. Canada, indeed, had no grievance comparable to ours, but on the one hand Mackenzie King sees the common political interest now at stake and on the other he brings Canada as well as Britain into line with the unchanged position of America. The decision of Cairns is by far the most satisfactory aspect of the whole imbroglio."

Was Once Object of Dread

People in Olden Times Were Superstitious Over Eclipse of Sun

The fact that England is to experience, on June 20, the first total eclipse of the sun since 1724, recalls many accounts in ancient and medieval writings of the superstitious dread which eclipses caused before their nature was fully understood.

In a thousand years there have been about 12 total eclipses of the sun in England. They occurred in 575, 885, 1023, 1123, 1160, 1182, 1220, 1241, 1123, 1368, 1432, 1715 and 1724. However these dates beguile of dread occurrences connected with the eclipses had plenty of time to grow up.

Astronomers of today are worried by the difficulties in the way of accurate prediction of the central line and the time of the eclipse. Four thousand years ago it would have worried them even more. Two Chinese astronomers Ho and Shi, who failed to give notice of the eclipse of October 23, 2137 B.C., and added to their offence by being drunk at the time, lost their heads. Since their time it has always been accounted unlikely by astronomers to be drunk during an eclipse.

In the Solomon Islands eclipses of the sun are credited to the machinations of sorcerers, while in some parts of India they are regarded as portents of a good season of success in battle.

An eclipse in the Philippine Islands last year caused a great excitement among the mountain tribes, who, backed on their armor and shield, fled in terror from the sight of the sun being eclipsed.

Shipping Salmon Eggs

The Largest Consignment Ever Made in Canada

The largest live consignment of salmon eggs ever shipped in Canada was made by officers of the Fish Culture Service of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The eggs, from the Fraser River in British Columbia, fifteen million sockeye eggs in the "crown" stage, were transferred in specially constructed barrels from the Dominion Government's fish hatchery at Pemberton on the Fraser River below Hope, B.C., to the following spawning grounds in the upper Fraser: Stuart Lake, Francois Lake and the Quenell Lakes.

Fortunate indeed is the person, entering the dining room at a large hotel, who is acquainted with the head waiter, Umberto Traglia, who will be Superintendent of service for the new C.P.R. New Variety of Poultry

Said to be Much More Profitable Than

"Turken" is the name of a new variety of poultry which made its first public appearance at the Edmonton poultry show. It is not the result of a cross between the hen and turkey, as many have mistakenly supposed from the name (an impossible cross, but a matter of fact the Turken is a cross between a domestic hen and a bird of the pheasant species bred in Russia, and which is supposed to have the turkey feather). This Russian bird has a bare red neck like a turkey, and the prolegs of the neck are very much like a turkey's, and this may account for the suggestion that a turkey and a hen have been crossed. But by careful breeding on scientific lines, the strain has now been fixed and the birds have true to the new type.

The male Turken has a comb and crows like a cock, but talks like a turkey and walks like a pheasant. "Turken" is said to be more profitable than most poultry, but it is also a matter of interest to the general public, and one to which our Minister of Agriculture has drawn the attention of all poultrymen. If the claims made for turkens, that "while the flesh is similar to that of a turkey, it has more flavor and is more tender, also the legs and breast are much larger than those of an ordinary hen," are true, the birds of the week old are the quickest growing chicks of any known breed of table fowl, and that the pullets usually begin to lay in five months. It can be substantiated, the sooner poultrymen "catch on" the better.

If, in addition, as is claimed, the chicks are extremely hardy, easily raised, mature early, and are good layers, don't require any different care or food or more of it than hardy fowls, and are much more profitable, all the farmers and their wives will be glad to know where and how they can get a start in this new line of poultry.

Official Live Stock Annual

Study of the past is especially valuable as a key to the future. There lies the particular interest, as well as the scientific value, of the publication as the seventh annual live stock market and meat trade review, covering the year 1926, issued by the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It is indeed a vast mine of statistical information for the study of the development of the country. Quantities and prices of all classes are given month by month and for the last five years by year. The story of both export and domestic and export trade is told and reviewed in the fullest detail.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JUNE 12

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON

Golden Text: "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but he will deliver him out of them all."—Psalm 34:19.
Lesson: Acts 12:1-7.
Devotional Reading: Psalm 34:18.

Explanation and Comments

1. Peter Imprisoned, Verses 1-4.—Peter, James and John were the three prominent men among the apostles, and Herod Agrippa I, began his persecution of the followers of Christ, by having James beheaded. Finding that this did not greatly please the Jews, he selected Peter as his next victim and had him imprisoned to await his execution after the close of the Passover. Executions were not carried out during the Passover, and Herod was nominally a Jew and most careful in all Jewish observances.

Peter was guarded in prison by four quarters of soldiers, four sets of men, one set for each watch, two of whom were chained to Peter in his cell, and two were on guard outside, verse 6.

Many a man finds that a certain course of conduct is receiving popular applause is led on to further excesses. A public speaker desirous to a coarse and vulgar jest, and becoming a laughing stock to the audience, and the speaker is awarded a round of applause, he is prone to descend still further into the depths of degradation.—Dr. J. H. Jewell.

2. Peter in Prison, but Prayer Was Answered, Verses 5-11.—Peter was in prison, but prayer was answered, and he was miraculously freed from prison.

3. Peter's Flight, Verses 12-19.—Peter was miraculously freed from prison, and he fled to the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark. He was followed by the soldiers, but they were unable to find him. Peter was then hidden in the house of Mary, and he remained there for some time.

4. Peter's Escape, Verses 20-29.—Peter was miraculously freed from prison, and he fled to the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark. He was followed by the soldiers, but they were unable to find him. Peter was then hidden in the house of Mary, and he remained there for some time.

New Use For Helium

May be Substituted for Nitrogen in Air of Diving Belts
When helium was first discovered it was considered a sort of scientific toy, and was obtainable only in extremely small quantities. Then it was produced in quantity sufficient to take the place of hydrogen in airships. Experiments are now in progress to substitute it for nitrogen in the air of diving belts, for the nitrogen under high pressure enters the tissues of the bodies of the divers, and when it escapes during the ascent it causes the "bends." Helium, however, has an economic value with helium it will be possible for divers to descend to the bottom of the ocean, and to remain there for long periods of time without the danger of the bends.

Sacrifice Reindeer

Word comes from northern Siberia that the natives of Arctic villages, including the Chukchi, have already decided there shall be no summer, as killing scores of precious reindeer as sacrifices. It is unusually cold here, and the warms are barely kept at 25 degrees below zero.

The $750,000 concentration plant at the Fin Fin mine in Northern Manitoba has been operating since 1926. The mine is owned by C. L. Fisher, and the plant is owned by the Wainwright Board of Trade, which is actively supervising the construction of a railway into this area.

CHAPTER I.

It all began with the rustle of silk.

When Helmi's Aunt Lili came back to Finland for a visit, after six years of the crowded ways of life in America, the older womenfolk of her family regarded her with mingled feelings of awe, envy and reproach. Her sister, Helmi's mother, said it was a shame for a girl who had come to earn her money hard, carrying trunks, to put it all on her back and wear clothes that only young people could be so wasteful of. At which Aunt Lili laughed, showing her gold teeth, and said it was a matter of principle with her to spend her money to fast that no one could steal from her; Helmi was the one member of the family who gave the visitor full hearted and unmitigated devotion. Helmi, the rich and sound of her silver skirts, and so she was, as Helmi, it seemed to raise the whole family to a higher social level, and she married young men, even her mother, would dare to find fault with this wonderful person, who had her stockings, laid her on the inside of her coat, and pink ribbons in garments that did not show at all!

Aunt Lili had not spent all her money on her own clothes. To Helmi's mother she had brought a purse which closed with a crack. It had a head on one side, and two claws which could be flipped on the other side; gold satin lining; mysterious chambers inside; she brought a silk handkerchief, with wadded roses on both sides, a sort of magic handkerchief, for no matter how hard it was squeezed by one hand it would spring out again without even a wrinkle. To Anna, Helmi's big sister, who had her hair done in curls, she brought a square bottle of powder of the color of silk, and a round dainty thing to put it on with. Aunt Lili used a black sock herself for this purpose, but she said powder-puffs were certainly the style in America now.

Aunt Lili made many contrasts between her own life and the life of the work too hard here, she said, "and you never play. We work in America, but we have good times. The country is all right for us, but what is there for women but raising children and work. When a woman here is married to a man who is old and her life is over. It is all just giving in, and giving up for women, until at last they give out. I wouldn't live here if you don't want to live in my country. I couldn't stand it now after Helmi with her golden hair, and eyes the color of the green brown moss in the bottom of the running pure at home. "Oh, just enough time to see Helmi and tell her that things are all right here," she said.

And so the frightened Helmi, who had expected to be met by the first person who had brightened her childhood, came into the dark and dreary room, where only vivid spot was the white face on the soiled pillow with tip two burning eyes.

"Don't kiss me, Helmi. I don't like it. It is a bad disease! I have it all right now. I thought it was just a cold like I often have, but it's worse than that. Anyway, I only wanted to see Helmi and tell you. Don't stay with Mima. He says he will keep you. You do not owe him the money—it was mine. He wants you because you are young and pretty. The girls tell me he's acting bad already, and me not dead so soon. I have money enough to send you back, Helmi, that will be best. You know what is ahead of you at home. It might be worse. You will go back, won't you, Helmi?" Helmi fell on her knees beside the bed.

"But isn't it a good country, Aunt Lili, like you said, 'I can't get along here now. I thought it was just a cold like I often have, but it's worse than that. Anyway, I only wanted to see Helmi and tell you. Don't stay with Mima. He says he will keep you. You do not owe him the money—it was mine. He wants you because you are young and pretty. The girls tell me he's acting bad already, and me not dead so soon. I have money enough to send you back, Helmi, that will be best. You know what is ahead of you at home. It might be worse. You will go back, won't you, Helmi?'" Helmi fell on her knees beside the bed.

"But isn't it a good country, Aunt Lili, like you said, 'I can't get along here now. I thought it was just a cold like I often have, but it's worse than that. Anyway, I only wanted to see Helmi and tell you. Don't stay with Mima. He says he will keep you. You do not owe him the money—it was mine. He wants you because you are young and pretty. The girls tell me he's acting bad already, and me not dead so soon. I have money enough to send you back, Helmi, that will be best. You know what is ahead of you at home. It might be worse. Moderation in Exercise

If Carried to Excess it May Become Dangerous

Do not envy Samson or Hercules. The strong man, says an expert adviser, is often the one who weakens first in the struggle for life. The man with moderate physical strength is the one who is likely to retain his health the longer and to get more enjoyment out of life.

A man who devotes much of his time in training his muscles to an exaggerated development, expecting at the same time to acquire a robust constitution, is making a double mistake. In the first place, he injures his health through over-exercising, and then his muscles assume a grotesque appearance which shocks the artistic eye.

If one observes the statues of ancient Greece, he will notice at first sight that there is no exaggeration in the size of the muscles. Perfect form and beauty demand moderation.

Athletes practiced in moderation produce beautiful results, while if it is carried to excess it becomes disastrous. The man who is gone to waste through child labor, the man who is gone to waste through the penalty of his greatness.

Boys and young men seem to have a natural attraction for athletics. Nothing is more difficult than to discourage a boy who has made up his mind to become an athlete. For this reason, the boys and the girls are largely to blame, as they are not an athlete to their sons, an ideal of manhood. It is rather rare in a man of moderate intellectual development.

If the following question is asked: What are the physical exercises recommended as likely to develop an athlete? The answer is: The modern man, as in corporate man, the bureau of statistics of any life insurance company will give the following answer: "The grown-up boys and young men, exercise in the open air in the form of games and plays, will be the best and the most enjoyable way of obtaining a sound and healthy body, capable of prolonged endurance. For men of a more sedentary life, the best and the most enjoyable way of obtaining a sound and healthy body, capable of prolonged endurance. For men of a more sedentary life, the best and the most enjoyable way of obtaining a sound and healthy body, capable of prolonged endurance.

Would Girdle the Globe

Colossal Number of Papers Printed Every Week on Boulevard Street, London

For many years the "News of the World" has been produced in Boulevard street—a comparatively short thoroughfare leading southwards from Fleet street to the Thames embankment.

Its sole, Boulevard street produces more newspapers than any other street in the world. If the pages of the papers sent out of this small thoroughfare in a week were placed end to end they would girdle the globe.

The vast weekly issue of the "News of the World" would provide a quarter of this belt, for, if the pages were placed end to end, they would make a pathway from London, across the Atlantic, across the United States, and a few hundred miles out into the Pacific Ocean on the way to Japan.

About 25,000,000 newspapers are published in Boulevard street each week. This is a weekly total of 1,700,000,000 copies per annum.

Of these, the "News of the World" produces more newspapers than any other street in the world. If the pages of the papers sent out of this small thoroughfare in a week were placed end to end they would girdle the globe.

Each issue requires 500 tons of white paper, 18,000 lbs. of black ink, and the use of the pencils, 70 miles of string.

Canadian National Sixth Annual
Tour To The Pacific Coast

In pursuance of a time-honored practice of affording its patrons every facility and convenience tending toward more vacation enjoyment, the Canadian National in operating its sixth annual tour confidently believe this will again prove of the greatest aid and convenience to all classes of tourists, as well as to professional men and business men and women, vacation bent.

The tour will commence at Winnipeg, from which point a special train of modern sleeping car equipment, dining car and radio observation car, will leave July 4th. The party will be personally conducted by an efficient and experienced representative of the Canadian National.

After stopping at various points of interest, the train will arrive at Prince Rupert on July 9th. At this latter point the party will embark on a palatial steamship for a cruise of 550 miles through the famous "Inside Passage" to Vancouver. While the tour terminates at Vancouver, those who desire to make a trip to "Victoria" may have their tickets read "Victoria" as their destination without any additional cost.

This mode of travel has many advantages. In the first place, it is planned with a view to including in the itinerary the most interesting points, which, with the other arrangements that are made, obviates the necessity of the passenger worrying about connections, sleeping car accommodation, meals, and entertainment en route. This is all done in advance by experts, leaving the passenger free to enjoy to the full the scenery and attractions attendant on this tour.

The local agent of the Canadian National Railways will be pleased to give you full particulars of this tour.
